

The World's Most Romantic Hotels 2015

by Team Fathom

Estancia Vik

Where: Jose Ignacio, Uruguay

What's to Love: This sprawling property has stunning views of valleys, streams, and wildlife (yes, those are pink flamingos), as well as low-key yet luxurious suites. In other words, you'll never want to leave. Except to go horseback riding with sweet guachos who tailor trail rides to your level.

Good to know: Saturday night asados prepared in a special graffiti-laden room are a delicious spectacle (even for vegetarians), and the Absolute Nero infinity pool studded with lights in the form of the southern hemisphere's constellations are both standouts.

Bahia Vik

Where: Jose Ignacio, Uruguay

What's to Love: A series of spare, sleek houses made from wood, glass, and zinc afford total privacy — including your own beachfront. There are no televisions to distract, just crashing waves. A series of minimalist pools scattered throughout the property ensure you won't ever have to fight for a lounge chair.

Good to know: Request Vidrio, the farthest casita. A lovely, Bauhaus-esque, modernist cube, it's reminiscent of Philip Johnson's Glass House and is perfect for lovers of contemporary architecture.

Viña Vik

Where: Millahue Valley, Chile

What's to Love: Connoisseurs of fine wine and contemporary art will love the secluded luxury of the latest venture from hoteliers Alex and Carrie Vik. Everything revolves around the 11,000-acre vineyard where some of Chile's finest wines are being produced. Revel in complete solitude in one of 22 light-filled rooms, each with inventive decor and sweeping views of the lagoon and green hills in all directions. Of special note: Enlist one of Vik's wonderful huasos (horsemen) for a bespoke trip through the breathtakingly beautiful vines.

Good to Know: Spa treatments have been formulated using ingredients from the terroir, including a Vineyard Recovery massage of grape seed and essential oils designed to relieve post-sipping fatigue.
